SHREWD SWINDLER FAILED.

Made Futile Effort to Beat Feed Company and Disappeared.

Detectives are searching the city for s ever swindler who attempted to defraud the Southern Feed Company out of about on Saturday he appeared at the company's office, and, representing himself to be J. W. Steer, superintendent of the Anheuser-Busch Brewery stables, contracted for a carload of oats and a carload of hay.

After entering into the contract he called upon E. W. Stamm, purchasing agent for the brewery, and offered him the two carloads for $700, which was below the coast price. He explained that he needed the money, and he would accept less than they were worth for ready cash. As the brewery had enough feed the offer was rejected. The swindler returned, howover, and had Henry Waldemeier, a heavy hauler at No. 1823 South Third street, haul the oats to Second and Gratiot streets, where he tried to sell them, but falled. Then he offered to sell them, but falled. Then he told Waldemeier to take the oats back to his stable for the night. Since that time the stranger hus not appeared.

Adolph Kalb, president of the Southern Peed Company, tracked his grain about the city until he located the oats at Waldemeier, and the carloa of hay on the tracks at Eighth and Graciot streets. Waldemeier, who did the hauling, is the only losser. 300 worth of hay and cats a few days ago mission merchants are of the opinion that they will not go higher than 33 cents, and after to-merrow the price will start to decline.

"I believe," said P. M. Kiely yesterday, "that eggs will not sell for more than 33 cents this season. From reports throughout the country the weather is becoming more favorable for laying. Aside from the atmospheric conditions, the price has been affected by the heavy demand during the lanten season."

St. Louis is one of the greatest egg markets in the country, and has been selling eggs cheaper than any other city. At New York they are selling wholesale at 27 cents, a jump of 5 cents since the first of the week. At Philadelphia they brought 40 cents year terday, while at Pittsburg 60 cents was quoted.

This time asst year in St. Louis they were selling at 144 cents per dozen, while in 190 the price was still lower, being but 11 cents. In 1839, however, they were almost as scarce as they are at present, selling for 33 cents.

Health Commissioner Starkloff

Says Smallpox Can Be Suppressed With Public's Aid.

Describes How Vaccination Is Performed and Gives Advice as to Methods for Averting Infection.

"We can stamp out smallpox if the people will do their duty," said Health Commissioner Starkloff yesterday. "While conditions are far better here than in any other big city in the United States, nevertheless there is reason for warning the people to ake steps to prevent the spread of the disuse. If the public will follow the advice of the Health Department we shall suppress smallpox with surprising rapidity. And all that the Health Department asks is that every individual consider vaccination a publie and private duty."

A glance at the periodical reports issued by the United States Marine Hospital shows smallpox has been kept well in check in St. Louis, while epidemics exist in other cities. The reason advanced for this city's good fortune is that vaccination has been good fortune is that vaccination has been more duly appreciated here than elsewhere. Health Commissioner Starkloff says the best cure for smallpox is prevention, and the only prevention is vaccination. "Vaccinia," said Chief Dispensary Physician G. A. Jordan, "immunizes against variola, just as variola immunizes against vaccinia. The theory is, in plain words, that a person is made immune to smallpox by inoculation with chickenpox virus. "No serious results ever come from vaccination, providing the operation is properly performed, the virus be of good quality and the patient exercise ordinary caution from the time the vaccination is performed until the scab falls from the arm. Now and then you hear stories of ill effects from vaccination. But these stories are not true. In ninety-nine cases out of 100 infection is due to carelessness on the part of the person who has been vaccinated.

Should Have Good Virus.

guarantees are issued on the strength of elaborate tests.

"The purity and efficacy of the virus are demonstrated by inoculating it into the peritoneum of a guinea pig. I feel safe in saying that virus obtained from all reputable concerns is absolutely pure.

"The operation is simple. The physician first washes the patient's arm with scap and water. Then alcohol is rubbed on the arm and is allowed to evaporate. The physician now takes the vaccine point. The virus is on and about the tip of the lvory point, and the tip is inclosed in a glass cap, which is sealed with paraffine. The paraffine seal is broken by the physician and the glass cap removed from the two point.

"With the tip the physician makes two small scarifications on the arm, at the insertion of the deltoid muscle. The scarifications are made by removing the epidermis, without drawing blood, and the scarifications need not be at all large. The virus is now inoculated by rubbing the quill over the scarifications, and the operation is finished.

This done, the physician places a shield—an ordinary bunion claster will do—over the abrasion to prevent the sleeves from coming in contact with the scarifications and also for the purpose of permitting the lymph to dry. Next day the shield should be removed. In order to avoid irritation a linen cloth should be sewed inside the sleeve of the undershirt, being attached at the shoulder seam and hanging loose to the elbow. This linen should be clean.

"Within several days a vesicle will form at the place where the scarifications were made. This is a sign that the vaccination is effective. The axiliary glands under the pit of the arm will also become effected. However, there need be no pronounced inflammation, provided the patient will do his share to prevent infection.

"The vesicle should not be disturbed. Positively avoid touching it with finger nails or dirty fingers. If the abrasion gives a little trouble, wash it with clean absorbent cotton. Do not touch it. All evidences of the prevented by methods of cleanliness. There's no danger from the virus or the operation.

FOR BOULEVARDS. PLANS

Drawings Prepared by Draftsman Travilla of Street Department. World's Fair Directors probably will be invited by Park Commissioner Ridgely an Mayor Wells to pay for the grading of Lindell boulevard from Union boulevard to Skinker road. City officials are interested in the Mayor's plan to construct, on the northern boundary of Forest Park, one of the finest boulevards in the United States. As the boulevard would serve as an approach to the Exposition, municipal officials think the World's Fair company should aid in making the improvement.

Chief Draftsman Traville of the Street Department has prepared plans and profiles in accordance with Mayor Wells's idea. These drawings were sent to Park Commissioner Ridgely yesterday. It is proposed to cut a strip, about 250 feet wide, from Forest Park between Union boulevard and Skinker road, and construct a fine boulevard as a prolongation of Lindell boulevard. ILLINOIS EDITORS IN SESSION. President Atkins Talks of Contempt Cases and Censorship.

Chicago, Feb. 18.-The thirty-seventh annual convention of the Illinois Press Asso ciation began here to-day and will finis its sessions Thursday. General Smith D. Atkins, president of the organization and publisher of the Freeport Journal, delivered his annual address. General Atkins declared that a Judge should not have the power to punish for contempt offenses against the court individually, unless the offense is committed in the presence of the court.

offense is committed in the presence of the court.

"Even the President of the United States has no such power," said the speaker, "and a Judge should have recourse only to the remedies provided for any citizen."

General Atkins's remarks were applied specifically to cases wherein editors have been cited for contempt for newspaper criticism of some action of the court.

In reference to talk of censorship of newspapers and public speeches which followed the assassination of President McKinley, General Atkins declared that the act of any individual should not jeopardize the right of free speech. He also strongly opposed the agitation for 1-cent letter postage.

The suit was instituted before a Justice of the Peace, who gave judgment by default for Meyer for the amount sued for. Meyer sued on the ground of conversion of property. The Phoenix Company moved to set aside the judgment, alleging the Justice did not have jurisdiction. The motion was overruled, and the company appealed Judge Barclay wrote the opinion in the case.

The Appellate Court affirmed the finding of the Cape Girardeau Court in the case of George P. McLain, who was convicted, the record shows, of malicious destruction of property in causing pieces of fron to be run through a thrashing machine, though Judge Goode, who wrote the opinion, stated that the evidence was unsatisfactory. As two juries, the Judge stated, had passed upon the case, however, the judgment was allowed to stand.

It was charged that McLain had a boy, who was his ward, to place the iron in his neighbor's wheat, which he knew would be thrashed with the machine.

Decatur, Ill., Feb. 18.—Mayor Shilling, charged with neglect of duty, was himself on the stand to-day in his own defense. He denied that he gave any one authority to negotiate a siot-machine contract; denied the statement by Charles M. Borchers that he said he could not close a gambling-room because the gamblers paid for their privileges, and denied that he said the gamblers were willing to pay rent for a room in Masonic Temple, vacated because of the proximity of the gambling-room. He was not asked about the charge that immoral shows were allowed to run, or that he did not try to suppress gambling.

Former Chief of Police Applegate testified that no gambling was allowed. A number of Elks who ran the carnival last fall testified that the shows were not immoral.

The case ends to-morrow. It is the only one of the kind ever tried in Illinois.
